

Health and Safety Policy

Combined Chemical Services (UK) Ltd is committed to making health and safety a priority in our planning and execution of all new and existing operations, advice, processes and products.

No management function within the business has a higher priority than the safety of its employee, contractors, customers, associates and any other non-employees who may be affected by its activities.

It is our obligation to provide safe working conditions that meet or exceed all relevant legislative requirements.

We must comply with all relevant legal requirements and operate in accordance with industry and government codes of practice applicable to our activities.

We have a zero tolerance attitude towards unsafe working practices and we expect similar from all of our business partners.

It is our aim to provide all employees with the information, guidance and training necessary to ensure they understand their roles and responsibilities in achieving the health and safety objectives of the company.

James Marshall

Managing Director

1st March 2019